Do you know these days when you're off school and it seems like everyone else you know doesn't have time? Your friends in the neighborhood? They're all busy. Your friends from school? Yep, all busy. You've contacted everyone you know and it seems like you're the only person with the day off. What would you do next?

...Imagine you are in California, Anaheim and you spend a day at Disneyland Resort!

First, it seems so lonely. What will I do? Is it strange to go on attractions or eat by myself? What will people think? What will people say? Think about this, you're not really alone. You're surrounded by thousands of people whom all love the magic of Disney, just like you! In fact, you may even have the best day ever. Here are a few things I'd definitely check out throughout the day:

At some point of the day, grab your favorite snack or some ice cream, sit on a bench and take it all in. You're at the "Happiest Place on Earth" and all of the joy and laughter surrounding you is breathtaking. Listening to the music is very relaxing and there's nothing like enjoying a sundae at Disneyland. I mean, you could be in school or working, right?

Try to meet as many Disney characters as you possibly can. It's fun interacting with the characters and seeing all of the stories come to life. Take pictures with all of them and put them in a Disneyland photo album. You may not appreciate it now, or even a year from now, but you will eventually. One day, it might remind you of all the amazing impressions you had while exploring the park. Don't forget to post them on social media. After all, how many of your friends back home spent the entire day with Mickey Mouse?

Soak up the fun by riding as many attractions or rollercoasters as you can. If you're eating at the parks and they offer outdoor seating, sit down there. It's relaxing to sit outside and listen to all of the music while you're eating. And don't forget about the parades and fireworks! Remember, it's your day... live it up! Do everything you've always wanted to do but never had time because you have never been at Disneyland before.
