A new mall opened in our town last week.

You can find the latest electronic devices there.

They sell goods from all over the world.

There is also a supermarket that sells Chinese noodles.

Many customers drive to the mall. This causes air pollution.

If there is a lot of air pollution, the sky looks grey. People call it smog.

Smog can cause health problems.

That is why the government is trying to reduce pollution, especially in the busy parts of the city.

Social media is fascinating.

People from all over the world can meet online.

Most people say that social media is a nine on a scale of one to ten of the things that are the most important to them.

My favourite website is TalkToMe. I would give it eight points out of ten.

People are often under pressure because of modern media.

They are always in a hurry and don't have time for their real friends any more.

Students also don't have time to study for school.

Dear Mum and Dad,
Hong Kong is really fascinating! It's the busiest city I've ever seen. First I went to a mall. There were so many shops. They sell clothes, electronic devices and Chinese food. But people are always in a hurry. They work under pressure and don't have time for a good lunch. They usually have chicken and noodles, which they eat on their way back to work. Some people even study on the train. Students must get a score of 90 points on a scale of 100 to get a place at college.
I talked to some nice people. I hope we can meet online when I'm back home. Did you know there are some Chinese social media sites? Have a look at the photo I've attached. I took it on a day with clear air. ☺
See you soon,
Danny
